

SERMON NOTES

“Religious leaders (church leaders) can mistakenly confuse good spiritual leadership with the ability to control complex situations, confused emotions and anxious minds, thus hindering the deeper theological reflection in which the faith community needs to engage.”

-- Henri Nouwen, In the Name of Jesus, 1999

Boxwood Blight Affects Elkin FUMC

Boxwood blight, a fungus that has been found throughout yards in the Elkin area, has been confirmed among the boxwoods on our grounds. The Trustees have consulted with two professionals about how to handle the situation. Not all of our boxwoods are affected. To control the spread of the disease, four boxwoods will be removed—one to the right of the chapel door and three at the fire escape at the east classroom wing entrance. Others will be pruned to remove diseased areas. When removal is completed, we will begin a fungicide spray routine to prevent further spread of the fungus and improve the overall health of the shrubs. The fungus can't be killed, but it can be controlled.

The fungus grows rapidly in warm, humid weather. Its spores are sticky and can be spread by deer, dogs, cats, or rabbits brushing up against a diseased shrub, or by dead, infected leaves adhering to soles of shoes.

The Trustees ask that you not use the east classroom entrance (side entrance closest to the dumpster) to avoid coming in contact with the fungus spores accidentally. Avoid touching any of the boxwoods or taking any cuttings. If you have questions, please call Martha Smith or Steve Wells.
